Loomcraft Home

SEO strategy for a D2C home textile brand based in Faisalabad. A full audit-to-roadmap engagement, applied end to end.

Loomcraft Home is a practice client used to demonstrate applied SEO methodology. This is portfolio work, not a paid client engagement.

Where Loomcraft Home Started

Background

Loomcraft Home launched two years ago as a direct-to-consumer home textile brand selling bedsheets, curtains, cushion covers, and table linen, betting on better photography and fabric quality to justify pricing above the generic listings crowding Daraz and Amazon.

The Problem

Sales stayed steady but almost entirely from repeat customers. Organic traffic stayed flat, and Loomcraft's own site was nowhere close to page one for its own product terms.

What Had Been Tried

A freelancer added meta titles using the product name plus "buy online in Pakistan" on every page, six months earlier. Nothing changed.

Goal & Constraints

Get found by new customers, not just repeat buyers. Small budget, no marketing hire, all content approved personally by the owner.

Technical & On-Page Audit Findings

FINDING	WHY IT MATTERS	PRIORITY
Every product page targeted "buy online in Pakistan"	Google can't distinguish near-duplicate pages competing for the same phrase	High
No sitemap submitted in Search Console	Inconsistent crawling and no visibility into indexing status	High
4.8s mobile load time	Core Web Vitals failing on the device most of this audience shops from	High
Product descriptions under 80 words	Doesn't match what buyers search before purchasing (sizing, care, use cases)	Medium
No internal linking between related products	Missed opportunity to distribute authority and boost engagement	Medium

In plain language: every product page is fighting for the exact same phrase, so none of them win. The fix is giving each page its own real job.

Keyword Strategy & Roadmap

Category Pages

"Cotton bedsheets Pakistan," "king size bedsheet sets." Broader terms with real volume, right for pages with enough authority to compete.

Supporting Content

"How to choose thread count for summer," "how to wash printed cotton bedsheets without fading." Informational intent a marketplace listing will never win.

Product Pages

"[Specific print name] bedsheet set." Long-tail and low-competition, unique to this brand and impossible for a marketplace listing to claim.

Why This Works

Loomcraft can't outrank Daraz on "bedsheets Pakistan." It can win on specific, brand-differentiated, and informational terms no marketplace has reason to target.

30/90-Day Roadmap

Days 1-30

- Submit sitemap and fix indexing gaps
- Rewrite title tags and meta descriptions per page, no repeated phrases
- Fix Core Web Vitals issues (image compression, lazy loading)

Days 31-60

- Publish 4 informational blog posts targeting the keyword clusters above
- Build internal linking between related product pages
- Set up Google Business Profile if a physical pickup point exists

Days 61-90

- Review Search Console data against the KPI dashboard
- Expand whichever new content is gaining impressions
- Revisit product pages still showing weak engagement

What this demonstrates: diagnosing the actual mechanism behind poor visibility, building a keyword strategy grounded in what the brand can realistically win, and translating both into a plan a non-technical owner can follow.
